Doris Humphrey was born in 1895 in Oak Park, Illinois. It was pur joy for her as a young child to lirn new dance routines. At first, she was stiff like a bord. Doris soon opened her own dance studio. In 1928, Doris and Charles Weidman left to form their own group in New York. They would go on to rekord their choreographic works and produce some of the outstanding performers in the wurd.

Her career ended due to arthritis, for which there was no kure. Not being able to dance hurt Doris werse than her ailment itself. Dance would always bern in her like a fire. However, she did not retern to California in serch of other work. Instead, she became José's mentor and the artistic director of his dance company. Doris was one of the founders of American modern dance.
